

Supporting Excellence

“By donating to the ISM Scholarship Programme, you are not just helping an individual student to enjoy a high quality education ...

... you are also playing an active role in the eradication of poverty in Tanzania and Africa.”

Boniventura Mwapule,
2004 ISM Graduate

For more information on how you can support our Scholarship Programme, please visit::

www.ismoshi.org

Our Scholarship Students

“I believe that when you help someone out, you also instill in him a sense of responsibility and, if he gets a chance to share what he has, he'll do it willingly.”

Nicholaus Mollé,
2006 ISM Graduate

Creating Leaders

I attended a public primary school and in those days, I had to walk the five kilometers to school carrying a broom, water drum, books and sometimes a hand hoe, slasher or cow dung for the school farm. ... After graduating, I plan to work on Economic Policy in poor African countries. Ultimately I want to go back to improve our struggling economy. Tanzania needs people like me to come back and help.

Boniventura Mwapule, 2004 ISM graduate, is currently studying economics at Duke University on a full scholarship

In my case it is cheaper and more manageable for me to study in the USA than in Tanzania, because I am on 100% Financial Aid, whereas I would have to take a loan if I were to study in Tanzania and the loan itself would not cover everything. ... I also chose to study in the USA because I had a tremendous experience with an international community at ISM and I realized how much more I could learn from people of different backgrounds. That kind of learning environment is invaluable.

Stephen Lwendo, 2006 ISM Graduate, is currently studying engineering at Harvard University on a full scholarship

After going through ISM, I have come to believe that the best solutions to social problems come from within communities concerned and that living outside Tanzania with the intention of helping might not help it at all in the end.

Nicholaus Mollel, 2006 ISM Graduate, has just begun a degree in Computer Science and Physics at Amherst University on a full scholarship

Education is the best tool of changing my country's situation economically, politically and socially.

Catherine Kayila, 2006 ISM Graduate, is currently working with the Kilimanjaro Centre for Community Ophthalmology and seeking funding to attend University

